SANTA CLARA, CA -- (MARKET WIRE) -- 03/17/08 -- The Global Supply Chain Leaders Group (GSCLG) congratulates Mr. Sergio Retamal on his recent accomplishment of being honored as one of the top "2008 Pros to Know" by the Supply & Demand Chain Executive Magazine.

Sergio Retamal is President, and Founder of Global4PL, a supply chain and execution company that helps companies reduce their costs and achieve their full operational potential. Mr. Retamal possesses significant experience leading the planning and implementation of complex global supply chain networks, presenting and teaching his findings, and advancing the study and practice of supply chain management.

"Sergio Retamal distinguished himself among the many candidates for this year's Pros to Know because of his active and continuing participation in the supply chain community, and promoting excellence and best practices," said Andrew K. Reese, Editor of Supply and Demand Chain Executive magazine.

Mr. Retamal's recognition as one the "2008 Pros To Know" is a consecutive award as he was honored one of the "2007 Pros To Know." It continues a string of achievements that includes the "TEN Award" (2006) underwritten by the AT&T Foundation, and the "Executive of the Year" (2005) from the International Transportation Association.

With over twenty years of professional experience in logistics/operations, account management, sales, purchasing, materials management, and transportation management, Mr. Retamal has become one of the most influential leaders in international trade. He holds a masters degree in change management from Pepperdine University's Graziadio School of Business, and an MBA in International Business from California State University, Northridge.

On behalf of the GSCLG Board of Directors, staff, and members, they proudly congratulate Sergio on his prestigious award, and the success that has emulated from his hard work and determination to continuously improve global supply chains and benefit their leaders.
